Social and Personal.

A brilliant company of distinguished women sat down to luncheon yesterday at the County Club of Virginia, when the Colonial Dames of America in Virginia celebrated the twenty-first birthday of the Dames in this State. The clubhouse was transformed into a veritable bower of lovely fall flowers and Colonial blue and buff predominated everywhere. The guests were seated at numerous small tables surrounding one large central table and all were arranged in baskets of yellow chrysanthemums caught with blue tulle and ribbon. Covers were laid for 135 guests and the place cards were embossed with the seal of the Colonial Dames in colors. Approaching Marriage.
Colonel and Mrs. John W. Richardson have issued cards announcing the approaching marriage of their daughter, Lois Gannaway, to John H. Miller, III, the ceremony to take place at their home, 1524 Grove Avenue, on the morning of Thursday, November 6, at 11 o'clock. Miss Richardson is a lovely girl and her wedding, although celebrated very quietly at home, is one of the most important social affairs of the fall season. Mr. Miller is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Miller, Jr., of this city.

Green Chamber.
An interesting event last evening was the marriage of Miss Myra Lucile Chambers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Allan Chambers, to William Elery Greene, son of J. E. Greene, of New York.

The ceremony took place at 6:30 o'clock in the home of the bride's parents, 514 Park Avenue, and quantities of lovely fall flowers were used everywhere. Miss Martha Chambers, of Hollis College, attended her sister as maid of honor, and the bride descended the stairs with her father, who gave her in marriage. Edward Greene, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the bridesmaids included Miss Martha Purcell, Juliet Martin, Annie Franklin Barnes, Elizabeth Ryland, Cary Talbot and Mrs. Walter Hubbard. Little Miss Beveridge Roberts was flower girl.

The Rev. George W. McDaniel, D. D., performed the ceremony, which was followed by a reception. The drawing-room, where the ceremony took place, was banked with chrysanthemums and palms, and lighted candles and garlands of Southern smilax were used on the mantels. The bride's wedding gown was a lovely affair fashioned of embroidered white crepe and duchess lace, and her long pink train was arranged with orange blossoms. The bodice of her gown was trimmed in pearls, and she carried a presentation bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore a costume of palest pink tulle, and carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums, roses, and the bridesmaids were gowned alike in pink crepe de chine and carried pink chrysanthemums.

Some of the guests from a distance present were James E. Greene, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Hine, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Greene, Miss Lucy S. Greene, all of Cleveland, O.; Andrew Squire, of the Cleveland-Pittsburgh Railroad; and Mrs. Squire; Mrs. Charles Patch, of Detroit; William C. Smith, Buena Park, Chicago; William B. Frear, of Troy, N. Y.; all of whom are at the Jefferson Hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. L. Barrell, of New York; Mrs. Harry E. Prominent Wedding.
Quantities of chrysanthemums, white lilies and Southern smilax decorated the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Mercer, in Skysville, Md., yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, when their daughter, Miss Mary Thomas Mercer, became the bride of John Addison, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Addison, of Ashland. The Rev. William K. Marshall performed the ceremony, and an improvised altar of Cathedral candles, palms and white flowers was arranged at one end of the long drawing-room. Miss Lillian Schultz played the wedding marches, and Frank Melior sang "O Promise Me" just before the entry of the bride party.

The bride's wedding gown was an exquisite affair of white crepe material trimmed in duchess lace and pearls, and she carried a presentation bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Her long veil was arranged with pearls and orange blossoms. Mr. Mercer gave his daughter away, and they were met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man, Robert Reynolds, of Richmond. Little Katharine Jane Mercer, sister of the wore a French frock of pink crepe de chine and chiffon, finished with a bouquet of pink chrysanthemums tied with tulle streamers. Frank H. Dove was best man. The ribbons were held by four friends of the bride—Misses Grace and Alwina Fritzschel, Frances Ludlum and Kate Winn. They wore white lace dresses with girdles of pink and blue satin.

Following a reception, Mr. and Mrs. Goddin left for New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Webster in their apartment at the Chestnut. Three tables were engaged, and the highest score was made by Mrs. Arthur W. EMPEROR WILLIAM RUNS RESTAURANT

Appeal by People of Potsdam to Kaiser Is Not Without Result.

BY LA MARQUE DE FONTENAY.

EMPEROR WILLIAM is the most recent addition to the list of royal bonifaces. Some time ago the municipality of Potsdam decided to close an old cafe, situated beside that historic mill which was such an eyesore to Frederick the Great, as impairing the view from his favorite palace of Sans-Souci. The people of Potsdam, thereupon, complained to the Kaiser that they had been deprived of their favorite cafe; whereupon he decided to build and equip at his own expense a restaurant, on a site near the windmill. It was opened a few weeks ago, and is in charge of a man of the name of Moritz, and is doing very well. The Emperor takes an active interest in its success, constantly visits it to inquire how "my restaurant" is getting along, and insists that it should dispense the best coffee in Potsdam, in addition to the other beverages, from which spirits are barred, though beers and light wines are permitted. William expects to render it quite as profitable an investment in course of time as his porcelain and pottery works at Cadzand, the wares of which are sold at a shop which he keeps for the purpose in Berlin, and where he frequently drops in to see how the sales are going.

The late King Oscar of Sweden was the principal owner of one of the leading hotels at Stockholm, until the day of his death, and did not hesitate to recommend it to foreigners, either visiting in Scandinavia or proposing to visit Sweden. The royal and distinguished civilian servants of the crown, and their widows or orphan families, devoting to this purpose a portion of the large profits which they are able to make off rich guests during the remainder of the year.

At Stuttgart, not only the principal hotel, but also the best restaurant of the city, both in the vicinity of the royal palace, have belonged for several centuries to the reigning house of Wurtemberg, which derives a very handsome income therefrom. King William prides himself as much on the excellence both of the management and of the fare, as did that ancestor of his, who, when Peter the Great declined when passing through Stuttgart to accept the hospitality of the royal palace, and insisted on putting up at the chief inn, was welcomed there by the portly and jovial ruler of Wurtemberg, arrayed in the regal costume of an innkeeper, although great dignitaries of his court, of both sexes, being attired as waiters, chambermaids, cooks, scullions, porters, ostlers, etc. The Wurtemberg monarch genially explained to the somewhat nonplussed Czar that he quite understood his preference for the inn over the palace, since the fare at the former was so much better in every way; but that since he owned both the palace and the inn, he would still have the pleasure of acting as host to his Muscovite majesty.

Readers of Dickens will be interested to learn that Major John S. W. Grant, who has just passed away in his ninetieth year, at Garmouth, in Scotland, was the nephew and heir to the wealth and cotton-spinning business of the brothers William and Daniel Grant, of Manchester, who were so graphically and charmingly portrayed by Charles Dickens, as the "Cheeryble Brothers" in his novel, "Nicholas Nickleby." In Dickens's own words, he "drew them from life," and did not in any way exaggerate the kindness of heart that "prompted every day, and offered by stealth, some munificent and generous deed in the city of which they were the pride and honor," and whose "liberal charity, singleness of heart, noble nature and unbounded benevolence" he made immortal by means of his pen.

Major Grant joined his uncles in their declining years, and on their death took charge of their business in the municipality of Potsdam, and of the Cannon Street, Manchester, and of the great Ramsbottom mills. He, however, made his principal home in Moritz, on that Speyside where he had been born, and where his two uncles had been crofters before they emigrated to Lancashire to seek their fortunes. Up on the Speyside, as in Manchester, the old major was much beloved and respected, and, by common consent, lived up to the traditions of his two uncles, "the Cheeryble brothers."

Captain Henry Wombwell, formerly of the Royal Horse Guards, afterwards for many years a theatrical impresario, as well as owner of the Peppercorn, Liverpool theatres, and at present secretary of Boodles, one of the oldest clubs in London, has by the death of his elder brother George, a Balaklava veteran, become not only a baronet, as well as owner of a grand old place in Yorkshire, known as Newburgh Priory, with a big rent roll, but also the custodian of the remains of Oliver Cromwell.

Restoration Charles II., reviving himself upon Oliver Cromwell by causing his body to be exhumed, and sending it to Tyburn, to be first hanged, and then burned at the foot of the gallows. Cromwell's daughter, Lady Faucenberg, whose husband at that time owned Newburgh Priory, secured, by means of bribing the guards, the substitution of another corpse for that of her father, and having obtained possession of the latter's remains, she conveyed them to her Yorkshire home. On the top floor of Newburgh Priory, at the end of a small chamber, there is a great mass of stone built into the wall, with an inscription setting forth that the lord protector's body lies behind it.

Sir Henry Wombwell's grandfather married Lady Anne Bellasis, the daughter and heiress of the last Lord Fauconberg, and thus brought Newburgh Priory and the extensive lands in connection therewith into the Wombwell family. The original priory was occupied by the Augustinian monks, and was founded in 1145 by Roger de Mowbray. At the time of the Reformation, Henry VIII. gave it to Anthony Bellasis, junior, of this family, who was succeeded by his nephew, the latter's grandson being the first Lord Fauconberg.

The mansion, which stands in a well-wooded park, celebrated for its grand old oaks, is full of treasures and relics, among the latter being the bride's saddle, hoisters pistols, sword and watch of Oliver Cromwell. Laurence Sterne, of "Tristram Shandy" celebrity, was for many years rector of Coxwold, a parish which is comprised in the Newburgh Priory estates, and the late Sir George Wombwell carefully restored Sterne's residence, Shandy Hall.

Sir Henry Wombwell, the new baronet, is now seventy-three years of age, and was a bachelor until about three years ago, when he married Lord Vaux of Harrowden's youngest sister, the Hon. Myrtle Mostyn, half a century his junior. There are no children by this union, and the next in the line of succession to the baronetcy and the Newburgh Priory estates, is the little three-year-old boy of the late Captain Frederick Wombwell, of the Sixteenth Lancers, who died last year, and who was a nephew of Sir Henry Wombwell.

I may add that there are several very agreeable Wombwells floating about on both sides of the Atlantic, who could not use the Wombwell arms without a bend sinister on their escutcheon. It is unnecessary and would be unkind to individualize. All that need be said is that their names will be found in the pages of Burke, Debrett, or any other of the Peerages, Baronetages, or standard works of reference devoted to the ancient houses of Wombwell, which is one of the oldest in Yorkshire, having owned land in that county ever since the reign of King Stephen.

"WERE OTHER CONTESTS WON BY THE ANSWER BOOK SETS?"

Yes, Nine-Tenths of Other Contest Winners Used Answer Books—Notably.

The Contest Editor said a day or so ago that the returns from other Book-lovers' Contests showed the winners of big prizes were those who submitted a large number of answers.

Now comes the query: "Did these winners of big awards use Answer Books?"

That query seems rather unnecessary. If a contestant submits a total of any 600 answers to you, this is going to buy a stack of 600 pictures and coupons or buy an Answer Book for about one-thirtieth of the cost. With an Answer Book he would need seventy-seven pictures only, yet he would submit his 600 answers to them.

Some time ago the Contest Editor said that nine-tenths of other contest winners used Answer Books. This, of course, follows naturally from the fact that the contest winners are those submitting many answers. They wish to submit these answers with the least expense, with the result that they secured an Answer Book.

Do not get the idea, however, that a contestant submitting his set in an Answer Book will be given any preference when it comes to checking the sets over a contestant submitting his set on single pictures and coupons will receive the same consideration. The awards will be given on the basis of merit alone. The ones getting the greatest number of correct answers will get the awards. The Answer Book is simply the cheap way to submit all your efforts.
